Find and Fix Outdoor Leaks to Save Money on Your Water Bill

Leaks account for about 14 percent of water usage in the average American home, according to the American Water Works Association. You can help conserve water and save money on your monthly utility bill by finding and repairing leaks.

Outdoor Leak Detection:

Before activating your irrigation system for the season, do a test run to look for broken spray heads, nozzles, and lines. Finding and repairing leaks will avoid significant leaks and potentially costly damage.

If you notice soggy spots in your lawn or wet spots on your sidewalk or driveway during dry weather, there may be a leak in your irrigation system. Call an irrigation professional right away to assess your system if you need help finding or fixing the leak.
